

Group and Family Services for Co-occurring Needs

Presented By: Jennifer Harrison, PhD, LMSW, CAADC

ABOUT THIS TRAINING

Group and family services for individuals with complex or co-occurring needs can be challenging clinically and logistically. Despite this, group and family interventions provide a power for shared recovery that cannot be achieved when only working with individuals. In this training, we will discuss evidence-based group and family interventions, how to set up and obtain appropriate resources for these services, and how to deal with challenging clinical situations in group and family settings for families and adults with co-occurring needs.
